

Many highlandroads are open

Written by Ulf Hoffmann

Wednesday, 16 June 2010 11:31

---

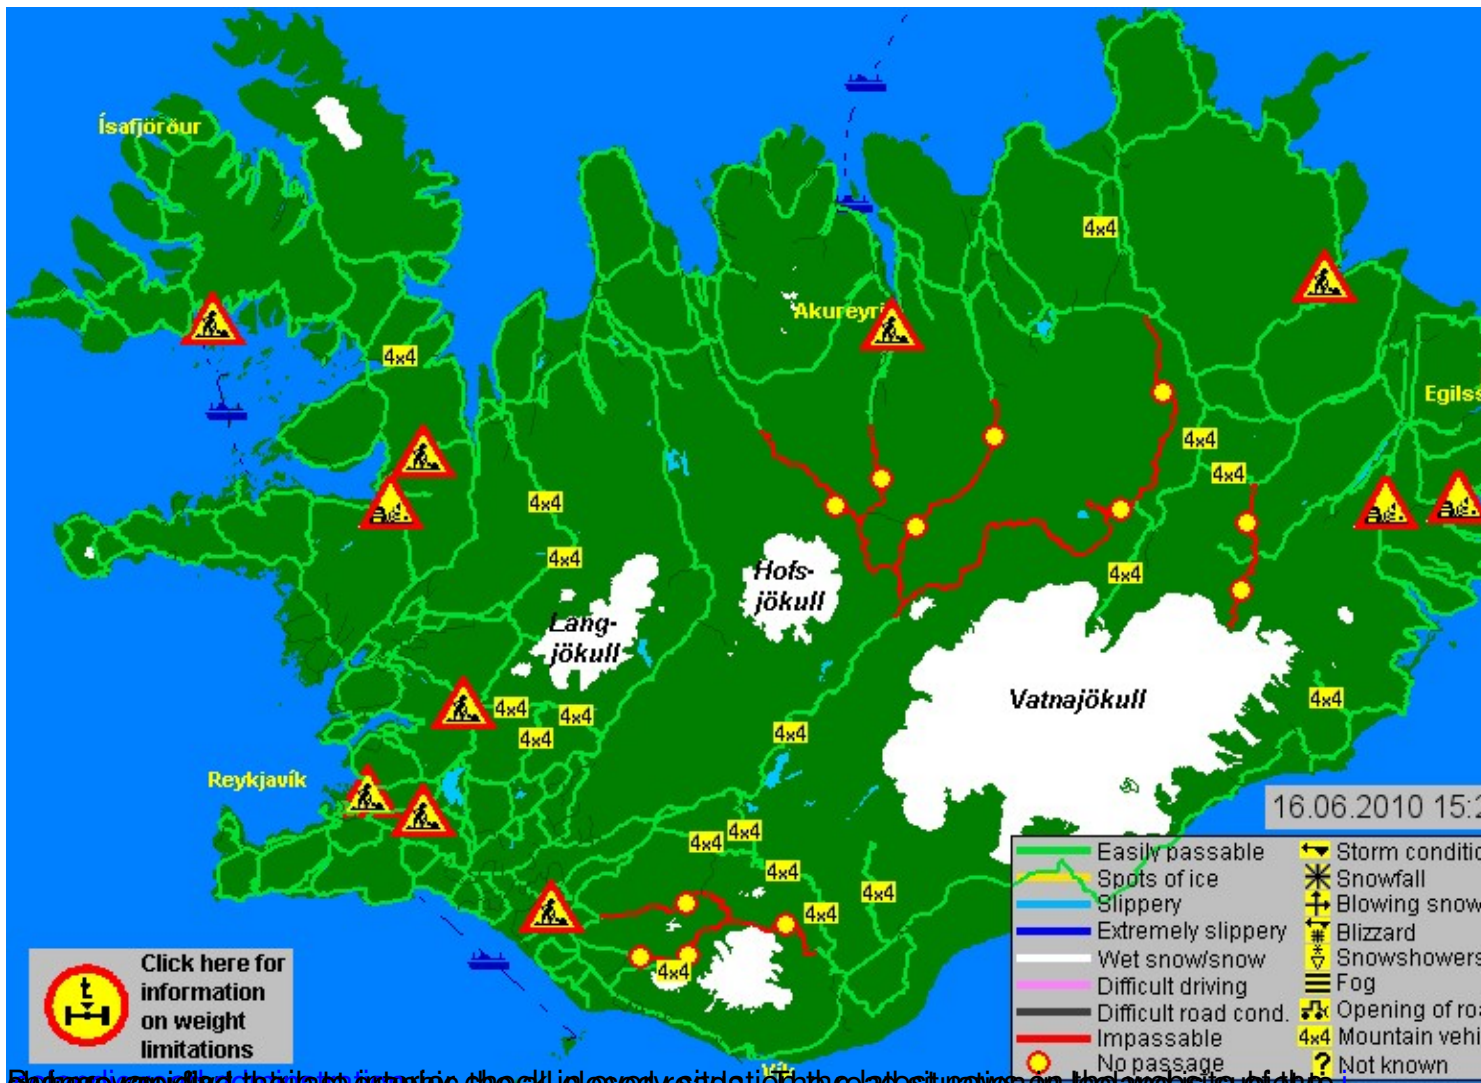

Good news from the icelandic interior: only a few highlandroads are still closed to traffic. It is not possible to travers in the northern part of the sprenigsandur-routes, around Askja and on the jeeptracks north of Mýrdalsjökull.

A transition of the sprenigisandur-route is not yet possible, but the second north-south-route Kjölur is nowadays open. In East-Iceland you get today by bicycle to the Kverkfjöll. In South-Iceland the road to Þórsmörk - which you was in parts disappear due to vulcanic eruption - is reconstructed and open.

Many highland roads are open

Written by Ulf Hoffmann

Wednesday, 16 June 2010 11:31

Can anyone provide the last graphic check of road conditions on the roads on Iceland? I have checked the last graphic check of road conditions on the roads on Iceland on the 16th of June 2010 at 15:20. The map shows that many highland roads are open, which is a positive sign for the summer season. However, there are still some areas where roads are impassable or difficult to drive on, particularly in the north and east of the country. The legend provides a detailed key for the various road conditions and weather icons used on the map.